proewildfire50crack64bit 12.99 proewildfire50crack64bit v11.1 . . . .Q: Docker run a python application with Python3 rather than Python2, from a Dockerfile I have a python application which is in my docker image. I have been building my docker image manually and now want to create a docker image which is immutable, such that i do not have to remember to start a docker image build every time i do something on the image. I have started with a Dockerfile which looks like this: FROM centos ENV PYTHONUNBUFFERED 1 # Install most python tools RUN yum -y update && yum -y install python3 python3-setuptools python3-devel python3-psycopg2 python3-pip && \ yum clean all && yum -y install curl wget RUN curl -sS \ | tar xzf Python-3.4.0.tgz \ && cd Python-3.4.0 \ && ./configure --prefix=/usr/local \ && make -j$(nproc) \ && make altinstall This correctly builds my image, however, it also rebuilds python to use Python2 instead of Python3. Is there a way to stop this from happening? A: I ended up using something like: RUN python3 -m venv /venv \ && /venv/bin/python3 -m pip install -r /requirements.txt
