The comparison of the antihypertensive activity and mechanism of action of three angiotensin II type 1 receptor blockers, olmesartan, eprosartan and candesartan, in stroke-prone spontaneously hypertensive rats (SHRSPs) was investigated.

The oral administration of each agent significantly decreased the systolic blood pressure in SHRSPs. The order of antihypertensive activity was olmesartan > candesartan > eprosartan at 2 mg/kg per day. The olmes
